

ABSTRACT

An image processing apparatus is disclosed, including: a dividing unit, a generating unit, an encoding unit, and a combining unit. The dividing unit divides the image into regions based on a division signal, where the division signal indicates image regions of an image. The generating unit generates components corresponding to the regions divided by the dividing unit. Each component is independently encoded by the encoding unit, and is combined into the codestream by the combining unit.